Coordinating Resources Efficiently to Bolster Success among Underserved College Students

Amanda Ciavarella
Digital Strategist, Rowan University
2009 - First Year of NJCAA Competition
Goals of this Presentation

- Walk through my journey of creating academic success programming at Montgomery County Community College
- Present some data about how programming impacted my students over the course of five years
- Stir up some creative ideas on how you can track data to use in developing programming at your institutions
2008 - 2009 Provisional Year

Eligibility

- 12 credits
- 2.00 GPA

11.68 credits 2.34 GPA

Completion Rate
88.4%

Success Rate
70.6%
How can I build a new program?

- Working with no budget
- Creating buy-in
- Not an expert
2009 - 2010: Study Hall

- Complete x hours of study hall each week
- Monday reports were sent to coaches
- Enforcement varied from none to extra work at practice to benching players at games

Anecdotal Indications of Struggle

- She thought the syllabus only outlined punitive guidelines
- She had no idea what a rubric was or how to use it
- He was too afraid to see his professor during office hours
- He didn’t go to class because there was no attendance requirement
- He thought he could do extra credit at the end of the semester
- She kept missing the bus and didn’t know she could switch sections
- He thought the professor hated him because he didn’t return emails
- She had to pick up extra hours at work because her mom lost her job

Lessons Learned

- Do research, rely on experts
- Get to know everyone on campus
- Always be advocating/partnering
- Spend time with your students
- Be creative with existing resources
- Write everything down, make lists
- Track as much data as you can get
- Look for patterns, make sense of them
- Try something different
- It’s okay to be wrong
